WILBUR AWARD DEADLINE
February 6, 2019
Welcome to the 2018 Wilbur Awards at the Religion Communicators Council’s Annual Convention in Atlanta. Thank you for joining us. RCC helps religious communicators tell the stories at the intersection of faith and the public arena. The Wilbur Awards celebrate excellence in journalism and religious storytelling. First given in 1949, Wilburs recognize the work of individuals and agencies as they communicate about religious issues and positive values. This year’s winners join a distinguished array from the long history of the awards. Each will receive a beautiful, hand-crafted award. Congratulations Wilbur Award winners!

Rev. Bud Heckman
President, Board of Governors Religion Communicators Council

2018 Wilbur Award Winners

HOST: M. Alexis Scott has a long career as a newspaper journalist, executive and visionary community leader. After nearly 17 years as publisher of the Atlanta Daily World, a newspaper founded by her grandfather in 1928, she was part of the executive team that opened the Center for Civil and Human Rights in downtown Atlanta in 2014. Before joining the team at The Center, her responsibilities at the Atlanta Daily World included management of its overall business operations, news content, and writing a regular column.

Formerly, Ms. Scott had a 22-year career with the Atlanta Journal-Constitution and Cox Enterprises, Inc., where she worked her way up from reporter to vice president/community affairs at the AJC, and director of diversity at Cox.

She is a political commentator on the Georgia Gang, a week-in-review program broadcast Sundays on FOX 5 Atlanta where she has appeared regularly since 2002.
